FORGED NOTE OF DISCORD.

The factional fury and gladness with which the official organ contemplates the final election of W. R. Castle as a delegate to the National Convention, is highly amusing in the light of the facts attending Mr. Castle's election. Notwithstanding the organ's forced attempt to place W. R. Castle before A. N. Kepokai who polled the second largest vote, the fact still remains that the presentation of Mr. Castle's name created the only contention that existed in the action of the convention on delegates to the National Convention. It was Mr. Castle's name alone that prevented the election of delegates by acclamation.

The action of the convention from the outset has been to work along such lines as would be in the final result amalgamate contending factions, put new men to the front, draw new power to the party, at the same time treating the old line politicians with respect. The convention has been eminently successful in carrying out this plan and it will adjourn with the utmost good feeling among delegates and delegations. That the ponderous organ of the morning should force its factional cry upon the party after the ballots have been counted is nothing more or less than a splendid demonstration of the hollow character of the Advertiser's party loyalty.

The happy feature of the convention is that it has at every step refuted and discredited the strenuous effort of the Advertiser to force factional war and place the native Hawaiian in any other place than where he belongs, in the forefront of the party councils. The Republican party, thanks to the sober judgment of the convention stands stronger than its most ardent supporters had dared to hope for. This strength will steadily increase notwithstanding the knifing policy of the disgruntled and defeated organ. The Republicans of the Islands are satisfied that Mr. Castle will work honestly and earnestly for the success of the party. In spite of the disloyal attitude of the organ that presumes to speak for him.

AN EPIC OF SECURITY.

An exhibition of disgraceful spite and bitterness that does not hesitate to desecrate the memory and even the graves of the nation's heroes, the attack upon Gen. W. De Long Post and their unanimously endorsed memorial day orator will ever stand as an epic in the low lived, indecent, scurrilous literature that has on occasions found its way into the public press of these Islands.

The method in which the ponderous organ deals with Mr. Sewall's remarks in their detail, in the sentiments put before the people gathered about the graves of those whom the nation is proud to honor, is utterly devoid of respect to the noble body of men who saved our Union, so thoroughly charged with all that is contemptible and discreditable to honest manhood and gentlemanly action that it carries its own condemnation to the dictator of such a disgraceful screed. The Bulletin today gives in full the remarks of the master at the Memorial Day exercises. There is not one word, not or little in those remarks which every loyal American, every honest citizen will not endorse. It may not be read with pleasure by those who in days past and even at the present day have given time and effort to withhold from the veterans of the Civil War that honor, respect and recognition of duty well performed which is their just due. That the Advertiser should be so prompt to voice the sentiments of snarling curs who have helped about the heads of living veterans and desecrated the graves of the honored dead suggests its own argument, makes positive the conclusion and only conclusion the public can draw.

Mr. Sewall's personal character, his well known patriotic integrity, the magnificent record of the Grand Army as an organization and its individual members are so far above the power of a paltry cur of the Advertiser stripe to impeach that extended comment is unnecessary. The disinterested, honest manhood of the territory of Hawaii as well as the Grand Army whose honored guest Mr. Sewall was, has only and will have only words of condemnation for the miserable tactics of an organ which has no pride of ancestry nor hope of posterity, which has no appreciation of courtesy and respect but also is devoid in its empty mouthings of the first instincts of gentlemanly conduct.

At the Orpheum.

The musical and ever popular Chimes of Normandy is the bill for tonight at the Orpheum. The Chimes, written by Planquette, is a very charming little opera with a romantic story, pretty surroundings and an exceedingly harmonious score. The songs are without exception not only melodious but catchy and the choruses invariably good. The Southwell chorus should give a good account of themselves in the Chimes. The principal feature on the opera is the character of the old miser Gaspard, a central figure so invested with dramatic opportunities that it might be almost said to belong rather to grand than light opera.

Mr. Wolf commenced his operatic career in the part of Gaspard, at an amateur performance in which, however, he was so prominent that he was immediately offered professional engagement.

The San Francisco Call cites him as easily the best Gaspard that has visited the Pacific Coast, his characterization of the crazed old miser being most masterly. The tenor role in the Chimes is unimportant beside the part assigned to the baritone—Henri Marquis de Corneille. Winfield Goff is admirably suited to this role and should give an excellent performance. Mr. Branson plays the Notary, assuming his own role of comedian, while Mr. Davies sings the part of Grencheux the tenor. The heroine's lines are sung and acted by Hattie Belle Ladd, while Miss Ballinger assumes the character of the village tell tale Berpette. The Chimes should prove most enjoyable as rendered by the Southwells.
